1. The subject officer has been under my command since June 1954, performing duties of a classified nature on the mainland of Asia, including periods of hazardous duty. He has had command responsibility for small, but highly specialized, technical units which exhibited unusual skill in successfully performing their missions under exceptionally trying conditions.

2. The subject officer has exhibited coolness, energy, imagination, and intelligence in the performance of his assignments. He has given ample evidence of being able to perform duties consonant with the next higher rank than his. This is a loyal, skilled, fighting officer.

3. It would be of service if this letter be made a part of his 201 record.
